INTROD. At 880 meters above sea level, Introd owes its name "interaquas," which means between waters, "entre eaux" in French, to its location between the Dora di Rhêmes and the Savara torrents. In fact, the village lies at the entrance to the Rhêmes Valley and Valsavarenche, two of the three valleys in Valle d'Aosta belonging to the Gran Paradiso National Park.

NATURE AND SPORTS. Itineraries of varying difficulty are available in both summer and winter. These include the famous Path of the Popes in Les Combes, which passes through places frequented by the Popes during their stays in the Aosta Valley. In the Gran Paradiso Park, other hiking trails and magnificent cross-country and downhill skiing trails are also accessible.

Plan d'Introd Castle | Aosta Valley | Description

It is a castle with unique features, particularly the rounded polygonal shape that distinguishes it from all other manors in the Aosta Valley.

The primitive nucleus dates back to the 12th century, while the present form was assumed following modifications in the 1400s. A major restoration project was implemented in the last century by the well-known architect Chevalley.

The rooms are furnished with fine antique furniture, and frescoes cover almost the entire manor: walls, ceilings, and door frames constitute an artistic heritage of inestimable value.

On the esplanade in front of the castle is preserved the beautiful granary, one of the rare examples of all-wood buildings typical of the late Middle Ages in this Region.
